

CURE FOUNDATION NEWSLETTER

April – June 2026

The past few months have been filled with encounters, conversations, learning and collective action.

Much of this time was spent on the ground, in local communities, alongside women who carry the knowledge, experience and strength of their communities every day. Listening and learning from one another, we continued to build networks of solidarity that form the foundation of the feminist movement.

Activists, organisations and researchers from Bosnia and Herzegovina, the region and around the world joined us in creating space to share experiences and build connections. Our work also brought us together with young people and students, while supporting new generations of activists and contributing to research and initiatives that preserve memory, advocate for justice and open up possibilities for a different kind of society.

The past months also gave us many important moments to celebrate: anniversaries, women's courage, activist legacies and stories that remind us that change is built through persistence, collective action and solidarity. Every encounter, workshop and conversation was part of the same feminist mission: to create a world in which women's voices are heard, their experiences are valued and diversity is celebrated.

ACTIVITIES: APRIL – JUNE 2026

Feminist HUB: Learning and Knowledge Exchange

We continued to develop the Feminist HUB as an open feminist learning space for sharing knowledge and experiences and critically engaging with social issues. During this period, we held three new sessions focusing on the media, women in politics and contemporary activism.

Together with Selma Zulić Šiljak, we explored the relationship between media and power during the event “Media and Feminism – Who Controls the Narrative?”. We discussed how the media shape public discourse, reproduce gender inequalities and influence women’s visibility, as well as how we can build a media landscape grounded in equality and accountability.

During the discussion “Ideals, Compromises and Red Lines for Women in Politics”, Denisa Sarajlić shared her experiences of political engagement, the challenges and pressures women face, and the importance of maintaining integrity and feminist values in decision-making processes.

With Naida Kučukalić, we discussed the kind of activism we need today, how to build communities rooted in feminist and queer values, the importance of local and intersectional action, and solidarity as a response to contemporary social challenges.

Women's Economic Empowerment

A member of the CURE Foundation team participated in a two-day training on the care economy, together with representatives of institutions from across Bosnia and Herzegovina. The training addressed a key yet often overlooked issue: how to make care work visible, recognised and adequately supported through public policies.

Through interactive sessions, participants discussed gender equality, unpaid care work, social norms, and the development of care policies, services and infrastructure. Particular emphasis was placed on exchanging experiences and developing concrete proposals to improve the care system in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The care economy is not merely a private matter for individuals and families, but an important part of social and economic development. CURE Foundation continues to advocate for women's economic empowerment policies that recognise and value unpaid care work.

Women's Network of Bosnia and Herzegovina

As the coordinating organisation of the Women's Network of Bosnia and Herzegovina, CURE Foundation continues to bring its members together through regular meetings of the Coordination Board. Members jointly plan advocacy activities, coordinate their positions and respond to current social and political issues affecting women's rights and gender equality.

Over the past three months, the Women's Network of Bosnia and Herzegovina issued two public statements in response to femicides in Bosnia and Herzegovina. In the statement "What Is the Price of a Woman's Life?", we highlighted serious shortcomings in the system for protecting women from violence, including inadequate risk assessment and insufficient monitoring of the implementation of protection measures.

Following further killings of women, we once again called for an urgent and systemic response from the relevant institutions, including the establishment of a Femicide Watch body, mandatory risk assessments, stronger violence prevention measures and more effective protection for women. Femicide is not an isolated incident, but a social and institutional problem that requires continuous and accountable institutional action.

On 5 May, a member of the Coordination Board of the Women's Network of Bosnia and Herzegovina participated in the regional meeting "Hearing Each Other, Seeing Each Other" in Ankara, dedicated to monitoring gender equality. The meeting provided an opportunity to exchange experiences and practices from across the region and to bring perspectives from Bosnia and Herzegovina into the regional dialogue on advancing gender equality.

Legacy – Digital Voices of Youth for Justice and Remembrance in Serbia and Bosnia and Herzegovina

“Jelena Šantić – For Courageous Steps” Award

CURE Foundation and Jelena Šantić Foundation presented the regional “Jelena Šantić – For Courageous Steps” Award, which is awarded every two years to initiatives and individuals for their contributions to peace, human rights, dealing with the past and regional cooperation. This year’s laureates were the War Childhood Museum and Dragan Popović, while special recognitions were presented to Jana Krstić, Karton Revolucija and the Plenum of Students in Blockade at the State University of Novi Pazar. The award ceremony was organised within the project “Activist Legacy – Digital Voices of Youth for Justice and Remembrance in Serbia and Bosnia and Herzegovina”, funded by the European Union.

“Link the Change” Activist School

Another important activity implemented within the project was the “Link the Change” Activist School, organised by Jelena Šantić Foundation and CURE Foundation in December 2025. During the school, eight participants transformed their reflections, knowledge and experiences into original articles exploring the topics they had addressed throughout the programme.

Drawing on personal perspectives, newly acquired knowledge and activist experience, the articles open up important conversations about transitional justice, the culture of remembrance and peacebuilding. Particular attention is given to the campaigns developed by participants during the school, linking identified social challenges with concrete proposals for action and advocacy for change.

We believe that every change begins with a question, dialogue and the courage to speak out. We invite you to read the articles and share them, because ideas have the greatest impact when they reach as many people as possible.

Together for Peace: A Feminist Perspective of Caring for Yourself and Community Around You

As part of the project “Together for Peace: A Feminist Perspective of Caring for Yourself and Community Around You”, CURE Foundation continued to strengthen regional feminist cooperation, the culture of remembrance and solidarity through participation in various peacebuilding and activist initiatives.

From 3 to 5 April 2026, a meeting of the Women in Black Network was held in Radmilovci, Serbia. A representative of CURE Foundation participated as a panellist in the discussion circle “Where Do We Go from Here? Civil Society in the Grip of Projectisation: Civil Society – a Corporate System, Business Model or Activism? How Do We Struggle for Autonomy?”

The meeting began with a minute of silence in memory of those who are no longer with us, all victims of war, refugees and victims of natural disasters. The meeting brought together 53 participants from Bosnia and Herzegovina (Tuzla, Sarajevo, Ćurčići and Klisa/Municipality of Zvornik), Montenegro (Herceg Novi), Croatia (Split, Zagreb), Slovenia (Ljubljana), Serbia (Belgrade, Kruševac, Kraljevo, Zrenjanin, Novi Pazar, Ruma, Novi Sad, Sombor, Pančevo, Priboj na Limu, Bajina Bašta, Prijepolje and Subotica), Poland (Kraków), Palestine (Bethlehem) and Germany (Berlin).

Regional cooperation and the exchange of experiences also continued through the activities of the “Peace with a Woman’s Face” Initiative. At the Initiative’s Assembly meeting, held on 15 and 16 April 2026, the annual report was presented, planned activities for the next three years were discussed, and new members were welcomed into the Initiative.

At the end of April, CURE Foundation also welcomed representatives of Women Building Bridges. Ludmila Lipskaya and her colleagues from Russia visited the Foundation on 29 April, providing an opportunity to discuss solidarity, mutual learning and the exchange of experiences, particularly in working with women who have survived different forms of violence.

An important part of the project is fostering a culture of remembrance and resisting the erasure of memory. As in previous years, on 31 May CURE Foundation marked White Armband Day in Prijedor, commemorating the beginning of the persecution and suffering of the non-Serb population of Prijedor in 1992. The day recalls the order requiring non-Serbs to mark their homes with white sheets and wear white armbands, which became a symbol of discrimination, persecution and systematic violence. Today, the white armbands are not only a symbol of suffering, but also of resistance to forgetting. They remind us of the importance of preserving the memory of those who were killed, went missing or were expelled, as well as our responsibility to speak about the past and stand with survivors and victims' families in their struggle for truth, justice and dignity.

Activities dedicated to the culture of remembrance continued in June. On 19 June, a representative of CURE Foundation attended the commemoration of the International Day for the Elimination of Sexual Violence in Conflict, held under the slogan "FOČA REMEMBERS – Silence Must Not Be Stronger than the Truth".

Women in Politics

Following a successful pilot phase, the Women in Politics (WiP) project continues from 2026 to 2029 through a partnership between IAMANEH Switzerland, CURE Foundation and the Association of Citizens Budućnost Modriča.

During the first phase of the project, 167 women participated in capacity-building programmes, while 45 women were elected to municipal and city councils/assemblies in the 2024 Local Elections. The new phase of the project will continue to support women through the 2026 General Elections and the 2028 Local Elections. Activities include training, mentoring and networking opportunities for women, as well as strengthening their digital security and establishing a rapid response system to address online violence and threats.

The project will also work to increase public support for women in politics, promote more responsible media reporting, and advocate for institutional changes informed by analyses and the experiences of women in political life.

Through its work in both entities, WiP will continue to contribute to greater representation, safety and meaningful influence of women in the political and public life of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Women Citizens for Constitutional Reform Initiative

Members of the Women Citizens for Constitutional Reform Initiative held an interactive session with students enrolled in the elective course “Gender and Law” at the Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo, under the mentorship of Prof. Dr Amila Ždralović. Through a discussion on constitutional reform from a gender perspective, the members presented the Initiative’s objectives, proposed amendments and the importance of engaging young legal professionals in building a more just and equal society. Students were also introduced to the publication “From Women to Amendments – A Guide to the Constitution”, which provides an accessible introduction to constitutional arrangements and gender equality.

The Initiative’s long-standing cooperation with the Faculty of Law, University of Sarajevo, was also recognised during the celebration of the Faculty’s 80th anniversary, when the Women Citizens for Constitutional Reform Initiative received a certificate of appreciation for its long-standing cooperation and contribution to the development of a legal system based on equality and democratic values. This recognition highlights the importance of joint efforts in education, advocacy and creating space for a more just and inclusive society.

The Initiative’s activities also continued by connecting constitutional reform with environmental protection and human rights. Members of the Women Citizens for Constitutional Reform Initiative met with representatives of Aarhus Centre Sarajevo to discuss the links between environmental protection, human rights and constitutional reform. Particular attention was given to the importance of strengthening civic participation and advocating for the right to a healthy environment through a gender-sensitive approach.

National Dialogue on the Protection of LBQ Women from Gender-Based Violence

On 28 April 2026, we opened a national dialogue in Sarajevo on the protection of LBQ women from gender-based violence in Bosnia and Herzegovina. LBQ women face violence within their families, intimate relationships, communities, institutions and public spaces, while their experiences remain insufficiently recognised within existing protection systems. Today, we have data, testimonies and recommendations, but one crucial question remains: what do they mean if survivors are still left without adequate protection?

The research report “Analysis on Gender Equality and Prevention of Violence against Lesbian, Bisexual and Queer (LBQ) Women – Research Report in Albania, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Kosovo and Serbia”¹ is available on ERA’s website: https://www.lgbti-era.org/resources/analysis-on-gender-equality-and-prevention-of-violence-against-

lesbian-bisexual-and-queer-lbq-women-in-albania-bosnia-and-herzegovina-kosovo-and-serbia

The recommendations are clear: recognise violence between same-sex intimate partners, make shelters accessible to LBQ women survivors of violence, train police officers, prosecutors, judges, healthcare and social workers, ensure safe referral pathways, improve the collection of relevant data, fund community-based support, and ensure institutional accountability.

We expect institutions to listen, act, coordinate and provide protection, and to recognise the experiences of LBQ women as an integral part of the system for protection from gender-based violence. Institutions must not become complicit in violence through silence, neglect, prejudice or exclusion.

Anniversary of the Zumbul Women's Association

On 9 May, a representative of CURE Foundation attended the celebration of the first anniversary of the Zumbul Women's Association in Blagovac, Vogošća. On this occasion, CURE Foundation received a certificate of appreciation for its support in establishing the Association and contributing to its work.

“Gen 2” Workshop: Healthy Relationships and Prevention of Gender-Based Violence

The “Gen 2” workshop was held in Sarajevo, engaging young people in discussions on healthy relationships, gender equality and recognising gender-based violence. Through interactive methods and discussion, participants had an opportunity to reflect on what makes a relationship safe, supportive and equal, while also learning to recognise behaviours that can undermine trust and safety in relationships.

Through the creative activity “Balloon”, participants explored the elements of healthy relationships, such as communication, respect, trust and support, and discussed the challenges, boundaries and barriers that can affect the quality of relationships. The workshop provided a safe and inclusive space where young people could freely share their thoughts, experiences and questions.

Journalists and Activists Together Against Violence Against Women

A meeting brought together journalists and activists whose work contributes to preventing and combating violence against women and domestic violence. We discussed strategies of resistance, the legislative framework, institutional responses to violence and other issues relevant to the protection of women's rights.

Young People from Denmark Visit CURE Foundation

We welcomed students from Flakkebjerg Efterskole in Denmark, who were on a study visit to Bosnia and Herzegovina together with their teachers. During the meeting, we discussed the position of girls and women in Bosnian and Herzegovinian society, the legislative framework and the everyday challenges they face.

We presented CURE Foundation's educational initiatives aimed at raising young people's awareness of activism, discrimination, stereotypes, prejudice and gender-based violence. We also discussed our work with young people and the importance of creating safe spaces for feminist dialogue and action.

The students also had an opportunity to speak with our young activists and volunteers about the position of young people in Bosnia and Herzegovina, their perspectives and challenges, as well as the ways in which they engage in social change.

“ESMA – The Strength of One Woman”

We attended the launch of “ESMA – The Strength of One Woman”, a book by our dear colleague, feminist and long-standing fellow activist Esma Drkenda. It was a pleasure to support Esma and, together with many friends and colleagues, witness an evening filled with emotion, courage and powerful messages.

Esma’s book offers an authentic testimony of war, recovery, feminist activism and the strength of a woman who has left an indelible mark, from her time on the front line defending Bosnia and Herzegovina to her many years of work with women and the community. We are proud to have been part of this important moment and to celebrate the stories of women who inspire, empower and leave a legacy for future generations.

Gender Parity as a Measure of the Quality of Democracy

Selma Hadžihalilović, representing CURE Foundation, participated in the parliamentary seminar “Gender Parity: Why Does It Matter and How Can It Be Achieved?”, held in the Grand Hall of the Parliament of Montenegro.

The event was organised by the Women’s Parliamentary Group of the Parliament of Montenegro in cooperation with ODIHR and the OSCE Mission to Montenegro, bringing together decision-makers and activists from across the region.

The discussions focused on the importance of gender parity as a foundation for legitimate and inclusive institutions, as well as on the limitations of formal quotas when they are not accompanied by substantive changes in political practice and social norms. Particular emphasis was placed on the responsibility of political parties, which play a decisive role in determining whether women have genuine political power or merely a place on electoral lists.

Special attention was given to CEDAW General Recommendation No. 40, which addresses the equal and inclusive representation of women in decision-making systems.

CURE Foundation continues to participate in regional processes advocating for women’s equal participation in the spaces where decisions are made.

Women's Peace Movement at the Bosnia and Herzegovina Diaspora Conference

On 6 June, CURE Foundation representative Jadranka Miličević participated in the Bosnia and Herzegovina Diaspora Conference (BIHDC), the first conference of its kind to bring together a younger generation of the Bosnian and Herzegovinian diaspora, particularly those who have spent most of their lives in the United States and Canada.

Held under the theme “Roots in Motion: Our Emerging Community”, the conference focused on connecting a new generation of the diaspora with Bosnia and Herzegovina, exchanging experiences and exploring opportunities for collective action. Jadranka Miličević participated as a keynote speaker, speaking about the women's peace movement and the role of women in peacebuilding in everyday life in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Exchange of Feminist Experiences with Activists from the MENA Region

On 9 June, members of the CURE Foundation team were guests of the Association of Citizens “Zašto ne” as part of the 12th International Fellowship Programme for colleagues from the MENA region.

During the meeting, we spoke with representatives of organisations from Iraq, Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco about feminism, different forms of gender-based violence, processes of retraditionalisation in post-conflict societies, the role of the media in shaping the social climate, as well as the challenges and experiences arising from our respective communities. Such meetings provide opportunities to exchange experiences, knowledge and strategies of resistance, while strengthening international solidarity among women who, in different social contexts, are fighting for a dignified life free from violence, equality and social justice.

Research on the Role of Women in Peacebuilding

On 11 June 2026, CURE Foundation welcomed Elvana Dervišević as part of her research for the master's thesis “A Feminist Analysis of the Role of Women in Peacebuilding Processes in Bosnia and Herzegovina”.

During the visit, we discussed experiences of feminist activism, the contribution of women's organisations to peacebuilding, the challenges faced by women activists, and the importance of incorporating feminist perspectives into processes of dealing with the past and building a more just society.

CURE Foundation continues to support academic research that contributes to a better understanding of the role of women and feminist movements in peacebuilding and to strengthening a culture of dialogue, solidarity and social justice.

Young Activists from Serbia Visit CURE Foundation

On 12 and 13 June, CURE welcomed representatives of the Alternative Centre for Girls from Kruševac, together with a group of young activists from Serbia. The aim of the visit was to learn about the political and social legacy of the past in order to better understand the continuity of resistance, struggle and solidarity that has shaped our shared region.

During the meeting, we discussed the importance of preserving memory, the Women's Court as a feminist approach to justice, and the importance of women's testimonies in preserving experiences, voices and stories that are essential for understanding the past and building a more just future.

One of the witnesses of the Women's

Court said:

"Because the truth can hurt – so deeply that it cannot be spoken lightly or shared with everyone. It can only be carried and understood by those who are prepared to be courageous, empathetic, supportive and respectful. That is why it is important to us that you are here and that you want to seek, hear, read and see the truth."

It is particularly important to us that young activists come together, learn and build connections across borders, because we believe that solidarity, mutual understanding and a willingness to engage in dialogue are the foundations of a society in which the past is not forgotten, but serves as a source of learning.

Discussing Feminist Activism and Peacebuilding with New York University Students

At the invitation of the Post-Conflict Research Center (PCRC), Jadranka Miličević presented CURE Foundation's long-standing work in the areas of women's human rights, feminist activism and peacebuilding in Bosnia and Herzegovina on 20 June.

During the meeting with the students, she spoke about CURE Foundation's experience in empowering women, advocating for social change, fostering a culture of remembrance, and creating spaces for dialogue, solidarity and activism.

The group of 12 international relations students was led by Professor Jennifer Trahan. The meeting provided them with an opportunity to learn about the work of local civil society organisations and different approaches to peacebuilding and the protection of human rights in post-conflict societies.

Feminist Organisations and Resolution 1325

On 18 June, CURE Foundation welcomed Professor Itziar Mujika Chao from the Department of Political Science at the University of the Basque Country, who is conducting comparative research on the implementation of UN Security Council Resolution 1325 and the participation of feminist, women's and other civil society organisations in this process. Bosnia and Herzegovina is one of the case studies included in the research, alongside Kosovo, Spain and France. During the meeting, we discussed the work of CURE Foundation, our experiences in advocating for and monitoring the implementation of Resolution 1325 in Bosnia and Herzegovina, and the role of women's and feminist organisations in peacebuilding processes and the advancement of women's human rights.

CURE Foundation at the BiH Pride March

On 20 June, CURE Foundation participated in the BiH Pride March, "All Colours Suit Us Well", showing its support and contributing to the event through volunteering.

Together with numerous citizens, we marched for solidarity, equality and the right of every person to live freely and with dignity. By participating in the Pride March, we once again reaffirmed the importance of solidarity, visibility and the continued struggle for a society in which diversity is accepted and respected.

Book Promotion: Ovo se ne može izbrisati (This Cannot Be Erased)

On 30 June, the book Ovo se ne može izbrisati by Andraž Rožman, a Slovenian journalist, writer and CURE Foundation volunteer, was presented at the History Museum of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Ovo se ne može izbrisati is a novel of voices about the erasure of 25,671 people from Slovenia's register of permanent residents, a measure carried out by the Slovenian state in 1992 and considered a form of bureaucratic ethnic cleansing. Slovenian literary critics ranked the novel among the ten best books from Slovenia in 2025.

Helena Ratté: From Volunteering to Researching Feminist Practices in BiH

Helena Ratté was an active volunteer at CURE Foundation and, through conversations, meetings and shared journeys, had the opportunity to meet numerous organisations and women activists across Bosnia and Herzegovina who have been working for years to create spaces for women's human rights and peacebuilding.

Together, we travelled, talked, listened to stories and learned about different forms of activism that constitute an important part of the feminist movement in BiH. These experiences also contributed to Helena's doctoral research at the University of Chicago, which focuses on women's activism, peacebuilding and the ways in which international policies, such as the Women, Peace and Security (WPS) agenda, are shaped and lived in local communities.

Helena's interest in Bosnia and Herzegovina extended beyond the scope of her academic research. Through her engagement with CURE Foundation, she demonstrated a commitment to learning about the people, experiences and movements that have shaped the past and present of this region. She studied the Bosnian language, learned about the culture and history of Bosnia and Herzegovina and the wider region, and built connections with women activists and organisations.

We are glad that she was part of our everyday life, sharing her knowledge, questions and curiosity with us, and that she will carry her experiences from Bosnia and Herzegovina forward through her research and academic work.

EL*C Lesbian Summit 2026

The EL*C Lesbian Summit 2026 was held in June in Skala Eresou on the island of Lesbos, Greece, the birthplace of the ancient poet Sappho. The Summit brought together more than 100 lesbians from 70 full member organisations of the EuroCentralAsian Lesbian Community (EL*C).

Participants had the opportunity to take part in 13 panels and workshops, five cultural events and five activities dedicated to self-care, creating a feminist space for connection, learning, strategy development and community organising.

The Summit demonstrated the strength of cross-border lesbian organising. Participants strengthened their networks, exchanged knowledge and developed collective responses to the challenges facing the movement, reaffirming the importance of solidarity, visibility and collective action in building a stronger and more resilient lesbian movement. CURE Foundation team member Selma Hadžihalilović actively participated in the Summit events, sharing feminist and activist experiences from Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Mark your calendars for 13–10 September 2026 for the XXI PitchWise Festival of Women's Art and Activism in Sarajevo.
